

Congress Must Act This Year To Provide Equitable Treatment For Puerto Rico's Medicaid Program.

Federal Medicaid Spending In Puerto Rico By Fiscal Year, 2022-2023

With enhanced funding expiring on December 13, 2022, Puerto Rico is facing severe cuts in its federal Medicaid funding and federal matching rate this year.

Action Item: Congress and the Biden Administration should work together to enact legislation prior to December 13, 2022, to permanently treat Puerto Rico's Medicaid program the same as other U.S. jurisdictions. The U.S. citizens of Puerto Rico deserve nothing less.

The Background

Current federal law caps Puerto Rico Medicaid funding and contributes at a far lower federal matching rate than if Puerto Rico were treated like a state. This longstanding inequitable treatment leads to less care, lower reimbursement to providers, and reduced access to coverage. In recent years, Congress has intervened and provided short-term legislation to increase funding and institute a higher matching rate. Most recently, Congress provided an additional $200 million for 2022, as well as an increase in the federal matching rate to 76%, rather than the statutory 55% matching rate. This money also included new strict program integrity requirements focused on contracting and oversight.*

Lack of Certainty

These short-term solutions have created an unacceptable amount of uncertainty for health care stakeholders. Patients, providers, and program administrators need certainty in the future of the program to make investments and ensure adequate resources for Puerto Rico's health care system.

Need for Action

Current short-term funding expires on December 13, 2022, at which time funding will revert to the statutory amount of approximately $2.9 billion and a 55% matching rate. Congress and the Biden administration should address this issue once and for all by enacting legislation to treat Puerto Rico's Medicaid program equitably.

Medicaid equity is long overdue for the U.S. citizens of Puerto Rico!

Key Facts and Figures*

- 43% of Puerto Ricans are living in poverty compared to just 13% in the states.
- 1.4M people are enrolled in Puerto Rico's Medicaid, ~50% of the population.
- Puerto Rico's population has significantly higher rates of hypertension, diabetes, asthma, HIV/AIDS, and other medical conditions, making Puerto Rico an important test case for demonstrating the value of addressing the social determinants of health.
- Due to insufficient funding, Puerto Rico is unable to cover many federally required benefits, including nursing homes, home health, and other key services.
